There was no immediate report of casualties after the civil guards cut all communications with the parliament building. The defense ministry reported all of Spain's military regions normal 35 minutes after the shooting broke out.

Madrid radio stations continued broadcasting but were cut off from the parliament building.

Also Spanish national radio said a Spanish army officer pulled a pistol in parliament on Monday and began firing, Spanish national radio said. Europa P.ress said the army officer shouted "everybody down" before he fired. There was no immediate indication of any Parliament on Monday was to vote on approval of Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo as premier. Calvo Sotelo has been caretaker premier since Adolfo Suarez resigned. The pre-vote debate was to be televised, but not live.

The shots could clearly be heard on the radio. The broadcast was interrupted and music began. All communications with the parliament building in downtown Madrid were cut. Police were reported seizing film and stopping broadcast, Europa Press said.

The Spanish national radio broadcast quoted shouts of "down on the floor or we kill you" another was: "Don't focus that camera, I will kill you." Radio commentators said a group of uniformed civil guards had burst into the congress, and the lieutenant-colonel had aimed his pistol at the speaker of the lower house, Landelino escape." Brezhnev blamed the West for international tension. The Soviet leader also strongly criticized U.S. policy while adding that Moscow had always followed constructive principles in its dealings with Washington. After noting that "unfortunately since the change of administration in the White House, overtly bellicose appeals and communiques bave come from Washington with the deliberate intention of poisoning' Soviet-American relations, Brezhnev called on the U.S. to take "more realistic positions." Brezhnev confirmed the Kremlin was "ready for a dialogue" with the United States, a dialogue which he said was "necessary." "Experience has shown that an essential contact is established at summit meetings. That was true yesterday and it is even more so today," he said.

The Soviet Union was ready to battle "hand in hand with the United States, Europe and all other countries" against the danger of war, Brezhnev said, putting forward a number of proposals.

These included a "moratorium on the deployment of medium range missiles in Europe," aimed at "freezing the quantity and capability of medium range arms, including forward based American weapons." The moratorium could "come into force as soon as talks started and continue until a treaty was agreed."

As part of "improving the international situation and avoiding war," Brezhnev proposed a "special session" of heads of governments of the United Nations Security Council members which could eventually be extended to other states.

Brezhnev appeared tired after speaking for more than four bours with two 15 minute breaks, but his speech, which bad at times been almost unintelligible at the beginning, was more distinct. No reason was given for the decision to have the speech read for viewers and listeners by a Radio Moscow commentator but one Soviet source said it bad been taken in advance, and observers speculated it could have been to avoid showing Brezhnev in difficulties.

Turning to Soviet links with Western Europe, Brezhnev expressed pleasure that "practically uninterrupted" dialogue bad continued with France at all levels, particularly with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing. Relations with West Germany developed "favorably and realistic progress had been made in relations with Italy. "Normal relations' had been resumed with Spain, but with Japan relations were more difficult, COPENHAGEN, Feb. 23 (AP) - SAS Catering, a subsidiary of Scandinavian Airlines, bas initialled a five-year contract with Saudia Airlines to set up an air catering service at Jeddah's new international airport, the company said Monday.

A spokesman for Copenhagen-based SAS Catering said the new company will be named Saudia Catering and will provide food services for all airlines flying out of the new Jeddah international airport. According to the contract, a SAS Catering management team will supervise the organization and running-in of the new company for the first five years. The new air kitchen service is budgetted for an annual turnover of about $31 million during the period. SAS Catering will receive an undisclosed management feeand a percentage of Saudia Catering's net carnings.

The air kitchen will employ 600 people, mostly recruited from Saudi Arabia, but the SAS Catering spokesman said the new company will expand as soon as possible to service all of the country's airports.

ference on the Middle East in which all interested parties, including the Soviet Union and the United States, should take part." It is high time to go back to bonest collective search of an all-embracing and realistic settlement (in the Middle East)," he added,

The Soviet Union is prepared to participate in the work of a new conference "jointly with other interested parties, the Arabs naturally including the Palestine Liberation Organization — and Israel," Brezhnev said.

Brezhnev said the Soviet Union was still convinced that a "real peace" in the Middle East tequired Israel to relinquish the territories it captuted in the 1967 wat. "The inalienable rights of the Arab people of Palestine must be put into effect, not sbort of establishing their own state," be added.

The report also urged Iran and Iraq to reach a politically-negotiated end to their conflict which it described as a senseless war that gave "great advantage to imperialism, eaget to restore its positions in that region. Btezhnev also said a threat to the Soviet Union's southern border forced Moscow to supply military aid to Afghanistan at that country's request. "Imperialism had launched an undeclared war against the Afghan revolution, which threatened our southern frontier. Such a situation forced us to supply the military aid the friendly country requested," he said.

"We are ready to evacuate the Soviet military contigent with the agreement of the Afghan government. But the dispatching of secret bands into Afghanistan must stop completely, and should be reinforced with agreements between Afghanistan and its ncighbors.

Brezhnev asserted that the Soviet Union would not allow communism to bethreatened in Poland and would not abandon a "brother country in misfortune." He strongly attacked "the enemies of socialism. who, supported by outside forces, seek to deflect the courses of events in Poland and point it in a counter-revolutionary direc-

U.S. bank cuts prime rate to 19%

NEW YORK, Feb. 23 (AP) - Chase Manhattan Bank, America's third-largest commercial bank, Monday cut its prime lending rate to 19 per cent from 19.5 per cent, but failed in match the 18.5 per cent prime rate set by No. 7 Cuntinental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co.

Most of the large banks in the United States kept their prime rates at 19.5 per cent. Continental Illinois, based in Chicago, undercut the rest of the banking industry Friday evening, announcing it was reducing its prime rate a full percentage point to 18.5 per cent, effective Monday. Among other banks at 19 per cent are Nn. 5 Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., which led the move on Feb. 9, and the First National Bank of Chicago. Confinental Illinois' move came after the Federal Reserve Board released its weekly data on the nation's money supply, which showed commercial and industrial loans at the nation's banks fell $1.188 billion in the week ended Feb. 11. Roger Anderson, chairman of Continental Illinois, noted the continued weakness in

EEC jobless hit 8.5m mark

BRUSSELS, Feb. 23 (AP) - The European Economic Community registered its worst level of unemployment in history in January, 8.5 million people, representing 7.5 per cent of the work force, according to EEC statistics released Monday.

There were balf a million more people without jobs in January than in December 1980, the highest one-month rise in unemployment since the EEC began keeping statistics in 1958.

The down turn hit all 10 countries in the community except Belgium, whose percentage remained the same dismal 10.6 per cent, the second worst level in the EEC. Ireland had 11 per cent of its work force on the nnemployment rolls, up from 10.8 per cent in December.

Other countries levels in relation to December were: West Germany from 4.3 to 5.1 per cent, France, from 7.3 to 7.5 per cent, Italy from 8.4 to 8.6 per cent, the Netherlands from 6.3 to 6.7 per cent, Luxembourg from 0.9 10 nne per cent, Britain from 8.6 to 9.3 per cent, Denmark from 8.5 to 9.5 per cent and Greece from 1.8 to 2.1 per cent.

Over the 12 months since January 1980, unemployment in the EEC rose by 1.8 million persons, op from 5.9 per cent nf the work force.

"Almost one half of the additional unemployed were registered in the United Kingdom, where unemployment went from 1.5 million in January 1980 to 2.4 million in January 1980," the EEC report said.

Industry plays a significant role in building a strong base for comprehensive development throughout the country. Since progress and development in any country depends un industrial advancement, the factory worker becomes the spirit of industry and ereates a strong link between his work and the development of industry. While this link is easily created in the industrially-advanced countries, the same becomes difficult in emerging and poorer countries which normally depend on their executives, officials and foreign expertise for the industry's development. Saudi Arabia, being the most industrially developed country among the emerging nations, has a pressing need for trained manpower. Since we have a lack of native manpower, the Kingdom has to meet its requirements through expatriate workers. We find many, if not all, modern industries being run by foreigners who have been brought in for this purpose.

But, if you look toward the future, the presence of such a situation seems to be impossible. Therefore, this is an opportune time to fill the gap by creating schools and industrial institutes to produce technical skills in conformity with the present industrial boom. It would be more desirable to benefit from the existing technical and vocational centers and to introduce specialized subjects at such institutes. However, it does not make much sense to say that the job of a plumber, an airconditioning mechanic, an ironsmith and a carpenter is more important than industrial specializations which enable the worker and the industry to make compreheosive development a tangible reality.

People being trained at technical and vocational centers do not benefit much from the present training programs for various reasons. Since oeither the state nor the trainee benefits much from these centers, a real interest in industrial training would provide opportunity for running national industries with the belo of trained native bands. Such a situation eventually would assist the course of industrial development and put it on the road to further progress.

countries slam the door in our face, why nnt buy from the U.S.S.R.," be said.

Speaking to Swedish journalists accompanying King Carl Gustav, Sunday, Prince Fahd said any initiative by Sweden to sell weapons to Saudi Arabia would be welcome. Advanced weapons acquired by the Kingdom serve as a deterrent against aggression, anddiversifies its armament sources, he added. Saudi Arabia is not bound to buy exclusively from any specifice supplier, be said.

Prince Fahd expressed his regret for the move by the senators from the Fnreign Relat"inns Committee. He said that the senators whn led the campaign on the grounds that the warplanes would constitute a menace to Israel had better leave the issue to the U.S. government to decide. "All we ask from President Reagan, or any European leader, is to be fair and just. Our right is obvious and Israel is behaving the wrong way. If we ask for pressure, this would mean we are oot right in nur demands," he said.

"The Palestinian people have a right to return to their bomeland, determine their own future and set up an independent state in their land. At the same time, a plethora of resolutions have urged Israel to pull out from territories it occupied in 1967, so why doesn't it withdraw?," Prince Fahd added. During the press conference, the prince did not rule out the possibility of using oil as a weapon to restore Palestinian rights. "When man is desperate, be might use any weapon within reach — even when such a weapon is oil, which is so vital for the entire world," he added. Prince Fahd said the situation is too premature to predict anything, but hoped that Reagan and his administration will not submit to a group of Congressmen wishing to support Israel without any valid justification and maintaining a bias agaiost Saudi Arabia.

Although the prince said be was optimistie about the Reagan administratioo's final decision, he would not say whether Saudi Arabia would accept the warplanes without spare parts. "Here again, we must not put the cart before the borse." He also denied rumors that 20,000 Pakistani soldiers joined the Saudi Arabian army. He described any such reports as "sbeer fabrication and calumoy." He also rejected any comparisoo between pre-revolutionary Iran and Saudi Arabia since there is no barrier in the Kingdom between the rulers and the ruled. Discussing Saudi Arabia's present 10 million barrels per day production of oil, Prince Fahd said future production will depend on world market demand. He said that wishes tn conserve its oil, but that the shortfall from Iraq and Iran supplies to the world prompted the production increase. The Kingdomfavors a moderate oil pricing policy, but any final decision nn policy rests with OPEC as a whole, be added. The prince emphasized that Saudi Arabia will continue to belp maintain world economic stability, but within the limits of its potential.

Prince Fahd brusbed away the idea that overproduction of oil by Sandi Arabia would result io superfluous money. "The Kingdom is so vast it will take you two-and-one-half hours in a Boeing 707 to fly from north to south, and all of the country needs to be developed and linked together. So there is no such thing as money above the country's needs. There are more than 100 Swedish firms operating in Saudi Arabia and they all can bear witness to what is happening in all these vast expanses of land," be added.

He said exprision arms' prices would be the reason that Saudi Arabia's defense budget was the highest in the world in relation to population size. But such costs will not deter the government from fulfilling its development obligations. Saudi Arabia wishes to bave a strong army capable of defending the borneland, but it won't be at the expense of other plans, be added.

Gulf ministers fix crab fishing rules

ABU DHABI, Feb. 23 (SPA) - Gulf states agricultural ministers recommended during their final meeting bere that various actions should be taken to promote conservatinn of crabs in regional waters.

Among the considerations are fishing restriction during spawning season and a ban on marketing crabs caught illegaly.

During the conclusion of the ministers' sixth conference here, the officials fixed the spawning period to be between February and June, but left individual states to decide the guidelines for marginal periods of "risky fishing." They also formulated rules and regulations considered necessary to protect and develop marine resources.

The ministers recommended contacting the United Nations' Food and Agriculture Organization to complete research and report on crab resources within the Gulf area, and sumbit ideas about developing maring resources.

One resolution called on member states with a fishing surplus to exchange or sell the. additional eatch to other members. The resolution advised member states to take advantage of the Kuwait training center for fishing methods and oote results of its research on lobster fishing and its development in the area.

A committee comprising technical experts from Oman, North Yemen and South Yemen will be formed to contact the FAO to prepare a report on the feasibility of a project using fish resources common to the countries. Another ministerial committee will study the report and recommend follow-up actions.

Gbuzi Algosaibi said the government believed in the "inevitability" of diversified sources of income in order to fulfill the country's basic development plans. The dedication was made Sunday to bighlight the countrywide celebrations of the National Industries Week.

Algosaihi said the government intends to provide all factors that will contribute towards a prosperous society and the country's entry into the age of advance technology. "With this in mind," he said," the government has spent a lot of money and effort more than might have been done in any other country.

"We do not like to boast of our achievements," he said. "But it is interesting to review what has been done so that we may realize that we are on the right track and gain confidence in our future."

Syria tells Europe to shun Camp David

DAMASCUS, Feb. 23 (Agencies) - Syria has said any European Common Market initiative for peace in the Middle East would fail if it was associated with the U.S.sponsored Camp David accords between Egypt and Israel. The comment appeared Sunday in the Syman government newspaper Tishrin as Dutch Foreign Minister Christopher Van Der Klaauw exchanged views with Syrian leaders on huw to hreak a deadlock in peace efforts.

Klaauw arrived in Damasucs Saturday un the first leg of a mission he is undertaking as president of the European Economic Community (EEC) council of ministers. An official source said he had already talked with Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul-Halim Khaddam. Tishrin mude ii clear that Syria believed the European initiative should be independent of U.S. policy, which it said had paralysed efforts for a comprehensive Arab-Israeli settlement, Arab diplomatic sources said the editurial reflected the view held by most Arab states which regard the Camp David process as dead and consider a new approach is required. Tishrin said the Arabs wanted a durable peace based on Israeli withdrawal from occupied territories and recognition of Palestinian rights to an independent state. Klaauw has a mandate to visit a dozen

Middle East countries. But Dutch officials have said he would complete only half his mission before reporting to an EEC summit in the Netherlands March 23 and 24.

Khaddam's mission comes barely 24 hours after President Ali Nasser Muhammad of South Yemen had completed his two-day visit here during which he had intensive talks

During hostage crisis

Iran sought help from U.S.

HOUSTON, Fch. 23 (AP) - The Iranian government asked oil well firefighter Red Adair and his chief competitor to help rebuild battle-scarred oil fields while the U.S. hostages were being held last fall, according to the Dallas Morning News.

Iran sent telex messages to Adair and to Boots and Coots, another Houston-based well-firefighting team, asking for help with oil fields damaged by Iraq, the paper said,

The two companies passed the messages to Washington and the administration of then U.S. President Jimmy Carter "told us to sit back and see which way the wind blows," Adair told the paper.

Carter had banned shipments of oilfield equipment and technology tu Iran, hoping the sanctions would speed release of the hos-

Adair's company had finished a firefighting job in Iranian oilfields shortly before the hostage seizure and embassy takeover in November 1979. After the hostages were taken, Carter imposed an embargo on trade with Iran or travel to Iran. In response to the messages from the National Iranian Oil Co. in Tehran, the administration told the Iranians they could deal with the firefighters after the bostages were freed, the news said. The newspaper quoted oil industry sources in London as saying the Iranian Oil Company is eager to repair oilfield equipment damaged in the war, but the administration of President Ronald Reagan has yet to say whether high-level help should be given Iran. Libya denies from Libya.

ROME, Feb. 23 (R) - The head of Libya's diplomatic mission in Rome bas denied that Italian guerrillas have been trained in military camps in Libya and warned of sanctions if such allegations were repeated. "Libya has nothing to do with terrorism," Ammar Taggazi, head of the Libyan People's Office (former embassy), told the daily Corriere Della Sera.

Taggazi said allegations that Libva backed terrorists in Italy and elsewhere were a "monstruous campaign" to discredit the Libyan revolution. He said military training camps in Libya were set up solely to teach the population bow to defend itself. There have been frequent press reports in Italy that a number of right-and left-wing urban guerrillas, including members of the Red Brigades, received military training in Libya. Taggazi invited Italy to send a delegation to Libya to see for itself that these reports were lies. But be added that Italian-Libyan relations, especially in the economic field, could suffer if such allegations were repeated. Italy imports 15 per cent of its oil

Haig plans to visit Mideast soon

TEL AVIV, Feb. 23 (Agencies) - U.S. Secretary of States Alexander Haig bas said he will travel to the Middle East "sooner rather than later," but said the Reagan administration has given priority to other issues. In an interview with Israel television's Washington correspondent, he said Sunday President Reagan had put first priority on his economic policy. "Without that, United States foreign policy will be severely damaged," be said.

Asked if that meant the Middle East had become less important to the administration, Haig said the Middle East "remains in the focus, it has been from the first day."

Haig said he will visit the Middle East soon. Asked to be specific, he answered, "I baven't established a time frame yet, but I anticipate it will be sooner rather than later." Haig said be expected "a very intense effort to consult with the parties involved" to revive talks aimed at granting self-rule to Palestinian Arabs in Israeli-occupied territory.

Sudan denies army accord with Libya

KHARTOUM, Feb. 23 (AFP) - Sudan has not agreed to let Libya equip and reorganize its army, a Sudanese official said here Monday. The denial, the second in four days, came after the Libyan Jana news agency restated an earlier report that the two states had agreed on the move.

The Sudanese Minister of State for Foreign Affairs, Muhammad Mirghani, Friday denied a Jana report that "a cordial oral message" relaying the Libyan proposal bad been given to the Sudanese ambassador in Tripoli last week. Jana, in a report monitored in Paris Sunday repeated the report and said that the agreement had been concluded through the Sudanese ambassador in Tripoli.

Sudan was one of the countries that protested most strongly against the Libyan troops presence in Chad, which borders Sudan.

Meanwhile, Libya's Justice Minister Mubammad Ben-Kassem Zlai said in Damascus Sunday that Libya is prepared to sign a treaty of friendship and cooperation with Moscow similar to the Syrian-Soviet accord if the treaty guaranteed Libya's independence and sovereignty.

Tougher conflicts expected In Africa

SALISBURY, Feb. 23 (Agencies) — The Soviet Union's diplomatie breakthrough in Zimbabwe and its increased naval presence in Mozambique have prompted fears of a tougher confrontation between black and white Africa. The Soviet Union established relations with Zimbabwe last week and announced its intention of sending more warships to Mozambique.

Some Western diplomats Monday interpreted Soviet moves as evidence of a Kremlin plan to establish a "red belt" across the continent from the Atlantie to the Indian Ocean, bringing the superpowers eloser to the conflict in southern Africa. The Soviet decision to reinforce its naval presence in Mozambique was announced after a South African commando raid last month in a suburb of the

Thailand reopens border with Laos

BANGKOK, Feb. 23 (AFP) — Thailand Monday announced it had reopened its border with Communist-ruled Laos, closed for two weeks since armed clashes between the two countries. A foreign ministry spokesman said the reopening of two key crossings on the Mekong River frontier, unpublicatized when carried out Sundayhad been a "goodwill ges-

"We considered that the border should be normalized as soon as the situation permitted," the spokesman said. He said no formal negotiations had been held. Thailand, citing security, shut the key crossings Feb. 8 after Thailand Lao troops traded artillery, mortar and small arms fire across a disputed islet knows as Don Sangkhi.

The border closing was the second in seven months to hit landlocked Laos, a staunch ally of Vietnam increasingly critical of Thai foreign policy. Each side accused the other of staring the latest outbreak of fighting, though officials from both agreed the tension reflected the uneasy situation in the region.

Zambia and Zmbabwe accuse Pretoria of training similar anti-government groups in their countries. Black African diplomats said South Africa's latest foray was evidence of a destabilization plan intended to avert a and the citadel of apartheid.

Black Africa bas often involved the Soviet Union and its allies in its response to South Africa's resistance to black rule at home and its grip on Namibia in defiance of the United Nations. Front-line black African states are calling for the war being fought over Namibia by the Southwest Africa Peoples Organization (SWAPO) with Soviet and Cuban help, to be intensified. Angola says Cuban troops will remain on its soil until Namibia is free.

The 16,000-ton cruiser Alexandr Savorov and another Soviet ship from the Indian Ocean fleet docked last week in the ports of Beira and Maputo. W.German terrorist reveals plan to capture U.S. officials

HAMBURG, West Germany, Feb. 23 (AP) — Members of the Baader-Meinhof gang planned to take top U.S. military officials hostage at an annual dance in Heidelberg Castle and to blow up the castle as a grand finale to a decade of terrorism, according to news magazine Der Spiesel.

Peter-Juergen Boock, a member of the gang captured in January, revealed the plans in a prison interview, according to this week's edition of the magazine. Boock, 29, said members of the gang still at large had been considering the "finale action" for several years. Two of them attended the dance in 1978 to scout security arrangements, he said in the interview.

"The commander of the U.S. army was present at the ball and almost the whole staff," Boock was quoted as saying. "Both members of the group sat almost right across from them. The woman who was there from the group was even asked to dance by a leading U.S. officer." The Spring Carnival ball this year is scheduled Feb. 28.

Boock was quoted as saying several members of the group, also known as the Red Army Faction (RAF) planned to make demands of the West German government after taking the hostages, then kill them one by one if the demands were not met.

Some of the terrorists, distraught that they had been isolated from society and other militant groups, considered making the attack a suicide raid, Boock was quoted as saying. The picturesque old castle would be blown up in a spectacular attempt to "achieve a new mobilization" of other militants, according to the interview.

Moi arrives in India

NEW DELHI, Feb. 23 (AP) — President Daniel Arap Mòi of Kenya arrived here Monday on a five-day state visit. A 21-gun salute boomed as Moi was received at Delhi airport by Indian President Sanjiva Reddy, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, members of her government and diplomats. Kenyan students also shouted slogans welcoming him.

The Kenyan leader is heading a 75member delegation which includes seven cabinet ministers. Four economie and technical accords are to be signed during his visit to increase trade between the two countries, Moi is scheduled to visit Jaipur and Poona in western India and also an atomic research center in Bombay.

Portugal premier gets party, coalition support

LISBON, Feb. 23 (Agencies) — Portugal's largest party, the Social Democrats, Sunday ended its sixth national congress with compromise that will give party leader and Prime Minister Francisco Pinto Balsemao a clear mandate in the party and in his coalition cabinet.

Balsemao, chosen to succeed the late Francisco Sa Carneiro for both posts last December, scored his major victory over more conservative elements in voting for the party's national council during the closing session of the congress.

Candidates proposed by the moderate 43-year-old lawyer-journalist outpolled contenders put up by the party's more conservative wing two-to-one, to take 20 of 30 elective seats on the council, out of 733 delegate votes cast, the prime minister's nominees took 480, while the conservatives secured only 248.

Three other party organs, the political commission, congress committee and judiciary council, saw the election of unopposed tickets. Pinto Balsemao led those voted in for the political commission.

Earlier compromise came in a marathon 14-hour session Friday and Saturday with leading figures from all the party's factions reaching agreement on a single set of tactical priorities to guide the group until its next congress. Thirteen different programs bad been proposed.

Further signs the soft-spoken prime minister bad gained party support included a standing ovation from congress delegates for his opening speech. The Congress victories appeared to throw off doubts circulating in party circles since the death of Sa Carneiro in a plane crash Dec. 4 that Pinto Balsemao

Portuguese Premier Francisco Pinto Balsenno could match his predecessor's political following — and might endanger the group's coalition cabinet with two rightist parties.

Pinto Balsemao offered to meet his opponents balfway, agreeing in his address that the party and government should work to limit presidential powers, while cautioning too strident a course would prove self-defeating fot the Social Democrats.

The governing democratic alliance is composed of the Christian Democrats and the tiny monarchist party, along with the Social Democrats. Although the alliance has a comfortable majority in partiament, the fragmented left polled more votes in the last election and Gen. Eanes, in the presidential election last December, soundly defeated the alliance's candidate to win a second term.

Total allergy syndrome

Dallas clinic may save U.K. woman

LONDON, Feb. 23 (AP) — The 20th century is slowly killing Sheila Rossall. She was to fly to Dallas, Texas, Monday seeking a cure to save her life. Reduced to 24.5 kg by a rare disease known as the total allergy syndrome, the 31-year-old former pop singer has been given only a few weeks to live. A Dallas clinic treating 25 similar patients may be able to help ber.

Rossall is allergic to most modern materials and foods. She swells up and vomits if she comes into contact with gasoline fumes, man-made fibers in carpets, curtains and furniture, plastics and processed foods. The heat from television causes her face to swell, and so does using a telephone.

She has lain bed-ridden in a dark room of ber apartment in the western England city of Bristol for more than three years, kept alive by air filter machines and the dedicated care of 10 friends.

cated care of 10 friends.

One of them, Annette Ellery, told the London Daily Express: "when we see her, we have to make sure that we haven't used toothpaste or deodorant for 24 hours. We wash ourselves with a mild baby soap and our hair with baby shampoo. We must never wear perfume and try to make sure that our clothes are pure cotton."

Mrs. Ellery said that three months of treatment at the Brookhaven Environmental Control unit under Dr. Robert Stroud will cost £16,000 and an instalment payment plan has been worked out. Friends and neighbors are raising the money for a "save Sheila fund." Rossall's consultant during treatment will be William Ray, described in British press reports as a total allergy sufferer himself.

The reports said Rossall will breathe filtered air and eat organically grown fruit and vegetables and wild game. They said treatment basically consists of desensitizing patients in a special unit sealed off from the outside world. Rossall once sang with a pop group named Pickettywitch, with whom she bad a chart-topping number called "Love me just a little bit more."

SECURITY AND ARMS

Once again the government of King Khaled has made clear that it will not be prevented from building a sophisticated, modern armed torce for the Kingdom's security and protection. If any friendly tant to supply arms to Saudi Arabia, the government will not hesitate to seek other arms outlets, including the Soviet Union.

In his remarks to Swedish journalists, Crown Prince Fahd explicitly pointed out that arms - without ideology - can be purchased from the Soviet Union or any other source.

Eight U.S. senators had petitioned President Reagan against selling bomb racks and fuel tanks for 60 F-15 fighter jets, which Saudi Arabia has contracted for, but not received yet. The planes are to be delivered in small installments beginning in 1982. However, at the same time Israel already has received the more advanced F-16 warplanes, the most lethal weapon in the U.S. arsenal. On the other hand, America's closest and most docile friend, Egypt, at present received the archaic F-5 jet fighter, which can be shot down by the F-16 without any effort.

But this did not bother the senators hecause Egypt is not Israel and does not have the voting punch the Jews have in America. The senators pointed out to Reagan that "while they recognized" the security of Saudi Arabia, they did not want to do anything that can jeopardize the regional balance of power, which might be upset by long-range fuel tanks for Saudi Arabian jets.

Such a deliberate affront to the most important friend the United States has in the region today naturally led to Prince Fahd's legitimate expression of displeasure, which is coupled with genuine solicitude for the economic well-being of the world - including the United States. The Crown Prince skirted the question of using oil as a political and economic weapon to avoid possible panic, although he did not dismiss the possibility altogether by saying that "in distress" any weapon may be used.

However, the prince did reaffirm that Saudi Arabia's oil policy has heen geared to the world's welfare and that the Kingdom decided to increase production to replace a shortfall in Iraqi and Iranian supply capacities. Even U.S experts realize that without this massive Saudi Arabian production, the price of oil would have skyrocketed to $50 per barrel.

Unlike senators who conveniently ignore the vital interests of their own country. Prince Fahd takes an overall view of the well-being of mankind. He has stressed his government's intention to maintain a regular and adequate flow of this crucial fuel until the world learns to conserve energy or find subsidiary sources — enabling oil producing countries to reduce their output.

Economic crisis cripples Uganda

By Tom Lansner

KAMPALA -Shops and stalls in Kampala's sprawling Owino market were busy with thousands of mid-morning customers when lorries packed with police and prisoo officers rumbled on the fringes of the market area. Armed with sticks and clubs, the officers fanned through the markets, collaring several hundred 'bayaye" - street urchins and hustlers who deal in salt, sugar, cigarettes, and anything else that can be bought and sold on the fringes of the established markets. Some 700, gathered from Owino and other markets around the Ugandan capital, were taken to custody after last month's operation, the first wave in what officials here claim will be an all out assault on "magendo" (black marketeering).

President Milton Obote's ruling Uganda Peoples Congress, which gained power in December in Uganda's first elections in 18 years, is pledged to reduce Kampala's astronomic cost in living, and restore some value to the now almost worthless Uganda shilling.

But efforts to cut prices, spiralling in Uganda's 100 per cent inflation rate, have gone awry. After the Kampala district chairman of the UPC decreed price reductions of 70 to 90 per cent for the Ugandan staple of matooke (green bananas which are pounded and cooked), other fresh vegetables, meat milk, and dry beans, most markets stand empty as farmers refuse to sell their produce at such low

Suppliers to the bayaye are lying low, boarding the already scarce supplies of essential commodities, and hoping for the pressure to lessen before they start vending their wares once again. Kampala restaurants are filled to overflowing with city residents unable to find food in the capital's

Many Ugandans welcome the move to cut prices, but few agree with how it is being done. All local newspapers, including the official UPC organ, have criticized the mass arrests of bayaye, the timest of fish in this city awash in corruptioo." So they have taken some small boys," ooe shop owner com-mented, "but the mafuta mingis (fatcats) are still driving their Mercedes,"

UPC officials describe the exercise as an effort to force prices low enough to allow a decent standard of living for the average city dweller, oow barely able to survive a few days on a month's official salary. "We are not going to institute long-term price controls," a UPC financial planner said. "We have seen that fail in Tanzania. We want to cut out the middlemen and bring prices down, so when commodities do come in, the price will stay low."

Massive shipments of salt and sugar are reportedly already in Kampala, but have yet to reach the streets. Officials say they are struggling to set up a new distribution network to circumvent the thoroughly corrupt established lines of supply. The economic crisis goes far deeper than the dearth of commodities and consumer goods. An acute shortage of gasoline that has crippled transport and industry over the past two months has eased, but is still serious. Foreign exchange reserves are down to less than a month's imports, and continuing mismanagement and misappropriation of scarce funds available are compounding the government's woes.

But for the fact that Uganda is a land of natural abundance, and that the Ugandan people themselves are resourceful and resilieot, this oatioo would have collapsed months, if oot years ago. It is this abundance and resilience which may pull Uganda from its present dismal state. Close cooperation with Kenya, engendered by two meetings between President Obote and President Daniel Arap Moi of Kenyalast month, is allowing a smooth flow of Ugandan imports and exports through Kenya's Indian Ocean port of Mombasa. Customs and police officials are working in tandem to curb smuggling along their common frontier.

Foreign exchange earnings from coffee, and later other revived commodity exports, will help finance the exhaustive refurbishing of Uganda's agricul-tural, industrial, and social infrasturcture so desperately needed. Large grants and loans to help in the rehabilitation are expected to be oggotiated with European Community and International Monetary Fund representatives soon to visit Kam-

Col. William Omaria, the interior minister, has been charged by Obote to clean up magendo and smuggling activities within the next two months. He promises to spare no one, from peasant to cabinet member, caught at illegal activities.

Iran makes secret arms deals

By Peter Deeley and Peter Durisch

LONDON -Iran, desperate for arms in its war with Iraq, is trying to obtain supplies secretly by using friendly countries as a conduit. A few weeks ago, a North African country approached Sam Cummings, the world's largest private arms dealer, with a request to buy spares for British and American military equipment.

Cummings said at his Manchester warehouse: They told us that the spares were for Iran, but we told them we could not supply them. The North Africans offered to provide the paperwork to make it appear the hardware was going to them." Sources in the arms industry report that Iran bas agreed deals for $100 million worth of arms last month. The same informant said that the Iranians had already obtained American-made spares manufactured under license in Italy.

Hamburg, he said, was being used as a transshipment point. Other sources in the industry indicate that Iran has also got military supplies from North Korea, Algeria and Austria. Iraq, it is being said, is obtaining its equipment through middlemen in Berne, Switzerland. A telex message was seen by ONS reporters asking for one million rounds of 20 mm. ammunition for Iran's F4 Phantom jets and a similar quantity for its F-5 Tiger aircraft.

Few countries would grant an export license for arms to go to either side in the conflict. Consequently, current deals being dooe in the West will probably involve a bogus destination for the arms in order to obtain an export license. South Africa is also getting large supplies of military hardware from politically "hostile" countries where governments are prepared to turn a blind eye to international sanctions. For commercial expediency, these nations are using third countries - sometimes without their knowledge or agreement - as fronts for the trade. Portugal carries on a flourishing trade with South Africa, selling buge amounts of ammunition to the military, although these deals do not show up in any government-produced statistics.

The Portuguese government's figures of arms exports for 1979, for instance, show sales worth $4,500,000 to Gabon: but the African government bas denied it received anything. In the first half of 1980, Portugal claimed it had sold 900 tons of ammunition to Thailand, but Thailand, too, has denied all knowledge of such purchases. Over the same period, the Portuguese government's statistics show that more than $3 million worth of arms went to Pakistan. The Pakistan embassy in Lisbon says oo arms were purchased, pointing out that the Pakistan armaments industry produces every type of weapon Portugal could offer.

It has some to light that the ammunition allegedly destined for Thailand was loaded onto ships of a Danish line. The same shipping line has been linked in Copenhagen with the shipment of 12,600 nnarmed grenades from Montreal to Durban. A shipbroker who chartered the vessel bas been convicted in Denmark of violating the United Nations embargo on arms exports to South Africa. He is appealing against the court findings.

Danish police bave completed an investigation into the movements of essels belonging to four shipowners suspected of carrying arms or ammunition to South Africa in the past three years. In two cases, ships bave been identified where a bogus destination was used in port, hut en route ship changed course.

Where South Africa has been the true recipient, the Danish national flag has been taken down and South African military ships have escorted them into harbor. During investigations into misuse of documents essential to the arms export trade a Portuguese arms dealer spoke of an instance where his government had issued an end-user certificate which details who the arms are going to - for military supplies. The hardware was delivered to a Portuguese airfield. "One night, planes came in and took away everything to South Africa," the dealer said.

Io Spain at least two cases are known where prominent arms manufacturers were used as intermediaries in deals when tanks from India and bowitzer shells from Canada were seot to South Africa.

In West Germany, an armaments manufacturer is under investigation for having allegedly supplied war materials to South Africa and Argentina, all banned by Bonn from receiving arms exports because they are "areas of tensions." The company claims all exports were carried out with government approval. The arms found their way to their real destinations by circuitous routes: arms for South Africa went through Paraguay; and, Argentina, received supplies through Spaio.

Another hurdle to effective international arms control is the common system of granting licenses to other countries - particularly third world nations - to manufacturer weaponry.

One London arms dealer said India was selling arms as a result of winning a license to manufacture. Yet that agreement had specifically limited India to produce weaponry only for its own needs. That governments are prepared to act as conduits for arms supplies from a manufacturing country to a politically sensitive area is confirmed by Cummings. He said: "It happens more with the manufacturer than with the dealer. But it happens fairly frequently. The intermediary country will do it either for political or commercial reasons."

All efforts to control illicit arms sales have failed so far to find common international approval. Another initiative, from the West German government, is under way in the United Nations.

Newspapers mostly led with Crown Prince Fahd's press conference he held Sunday with the visiting Swedish press delegation, highlighting his reaffirmation that oil could be used as a weapon at time of necessity and that Saudi Arabia is anxious to diversify its arms resources without being tied to any specific market. In a lead story, Ai Bilad said bilateral relations were reviewed in a meeting between the crown prince and the deputy prime minister of Sweden, while Al Yom led with the Swedish monarch's departure for the Eastern Province to visit the University of Petroleum and Minerals in Newspapers frontpaged reports on talks between the Saudi and Swedish sides as well as the crown prince's press conference. They also reported on their front pages that King Khaled would open the new King Abdul Aziz Airport in Jeddah April 5. King Khaled spatronage of the King Faisal Interna-tional award celebrations in Riyadh Monday figured prominently on the front pages of newspapers.

In an editorial, Al Riyadh noted that the crown prince was very optimistic in his press conference because the Arab issues are just and there is a possibility of these issues being understood completely by world governments. The paper added that Prioce Fahd clarified all the points which are being disputed io the world. He reiterated Saudi Arabia's stance oo the issue of Palestine and its insistance on the restoration of the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people as well as its keen desire to work for a stable world economy within its own capabilities, the paper said. Al Jazirah observed that the crown prince has made it very clear that the Kingdom would go to any source, even if it were the Soviet Union, to receive arms supplies. It endorsed the crown prince's conviction that the country, being vast in its area, needs every piaster of its treasury for its development. The paper expressed hope that the Swedish journalists "would not only understand our values, bot would also find answers to their questions which they gathered through vague information about the Kingdom's internal and external policy." On the same subject, Al Nadwa also noted that the crown prince has clearly acquainted the Swedish journalists with the Kingdom's firm policy and firm stances-on world peace and cooperation. The paper added that Saudi Arabia hopes to see America aod Europe taking just stances on the issue of Palestine and the arms supplies to the Kingdom. It reiterated that the Kingdom would never ask anybody anything beyood the domain of right and justice. The paper expressed the hope that "friends in the West would appreciate the Kingdom's sacrifices for the sake of world progress and prosperity, and would at least adopt impartial attitude toward aggression and tyranoy in the best interest of world peace and

In a review of Saudi Arabia's diplomatic activity, Al Yom said that everyone has observed its success during the Islamic summit conference and the con-enced the whole world, and "we cannot deny the Kingdom's efforts" in creating a formula for the Gulf cooperation, it said. The paper added that visits of world leaders to Riyadh provide evidence that Saudi Arabia has become the focal point for the whole world.

Al Bilad observed that during the past 10 years Saudi Arabia has become a premier country in the world working with scientific planning in building projects and creating the links of friendship and understanding with the peace-loving peoples of the world. Okaz dealt with the state's concern for social and economic services and said the visiting Swedish monarch expressed his admiration for the Kingdom's development plans and its role in the realization of welfare for its people. The paper said that while we rely on our youth for the country's industrial and agricultural progress, we open our doors for international know-how in order to achieve international cooperation in all fields.

On the other hand, Al Medina recalled the armed invasion of Afghanistao which took place a year ago by the Soviet forces. It said the struggle of Afghan freedom-fighters is keeping alive the Afghanistan issue in the world's conscience, but the Soviet Unioo does not pay any heed to human values and lignity and thousands have fallen resisting the Soviet presence. The Muslim people who are being persecuted by their internal regimes under the Communist-controlled leadership have already proved their steadfastness in the face of foreign domination.

he danger was clear to them within the half-honr. Quickly they boisted keshift distress flags made from the hed to their fishing rods. They dumped out of a gas tank, filled it with water to te it sink, and threw it ahoard to serve as a anchor. Dragging on the boat, it slowed drift into the high seas. Afterwards they re told that without that sea anchor, they all have hit northerly currents south of hrain and been carried far into the Gulf ere they ran the risk of being swamped by giant tanker. By high ocon, nonetheless, were well and drifting miles from shore any casual assistance.

During the afternoon, the rope attached to anchor broke. A second sea anchor was ne hy dark. They decided to keep the third a buoyancy aid should they approach land try to swim to shore.

Drifting throughout the long dull afteron, they were acutely aware of their peril. Kane's cracks about being very wet hoss in Iran sounded like gallows humor jeed. They had a dozen salami-andcumber-oo-rye sandwiches and one gallon orange squasb which they quickly noned. Murley estimated that if the speedat did not capsize, they could last 4 days. Tossed about on the limitless expanse of as, they were absorbed by the struggle for uvival. Eyes scanned the horizon for ships. We were very quiet," said Rutter. Toward evening we thought that maybe the Coast Guard might bave noticed our absence, but we didn't know what system the Coast Guard used or how effective it was,"

The men had checked in with the Coast Guard before their departure but not speaking Arabic, they had merely pointed to their watches and raised two figures to indicate that they expected to be back by 2 p.m.

It was lonely for the four men cramped in the 14-foot-long speedboat. "We couldn't even play 'I Spy'," joked O'Kane. "There was nothing around to notice, nothing you'd want to mention—only sun, waves, and sea." At one point he mistook some seaguls in the distance for fighter planes. There were, however, some things they didn't want to mention not to lower morale.

"Looking at the waves, you hegin to see things," said Rutter. "I think I saw sharks, but I didn't say anything." Murley too thought it best not to tell the others when he saw a barracuda leaping out of the water.

Towards nighfall, the men, now much with cold, stuck paper and cardboard down their shirts for insulation. They wrapped heads and legs in the blue plastic hags they had brought along in which to put their catch. Murley, who was in shirt sleeves, made a strait-jacket for himself ont of another of these bags. Although the temperature was 40 ° F., the wind and wet made it seem much colder. It was impossible to keep dry with spray continually drenching them. Crouched on the slippery bottom of the boat, Murley tried to sleep oo some whiting brought along as bait; but whenever he found himself on the verge of dozing off, waves would break and jerk him awake.

One man kept a looely night-long vigil at the wheel, trying to keep the boat to face wind and waves m order to lesson the danger

At 3 or 4 a.m. they saw lights flickering on the shore, but these disappeared with dawn. They saw commercial planes in the distance and twice spotted a helicopter, but no one apparently saw them hohbing helplessly in their small craft. They passed an island near the coast of Bahrain hut were not close enough to swim for it. "The island has a prison," quipped one of the men, "and we'd, bave been glad to join the iomates." But they struck to their boat knowing they couldn't survive long in the field waters with a swell of 7 to 8 feet, Fear, weariness and the continual rocking of the boat drove away any hunger pangs the men might have felt. The sea was very rough that morning.

"I kept thinking how glad I was to be wellinsured for it meant my wife and family would be taken care of," said 36-year-old Murley wbo works for Saudi Diesel. O'Kane, wbo thought rescue was "a long shot," kept repeating to himself "What a way to spend Valentine's Day!" "There was nothing we could do to help ourselves," said Rutter who was overcome by a sense of futility. Rutter had been in fine spirits oo setting out hecause he had just learned that his wife's visa had come through; but adrift he could only think, 'I'll be dead when she gets here."

At 12:36 p.m. Valentine's Day, 25 hours after they had started their dangerous drift, deliverance came in the form of a huge yellow double-rotor helicopter, looming out in the sky above, with its Saudi captain and 5-man crew waving at them, "I'll never forget seeing it," said Murley who first spotted the aircraft.

I said, "Well, fellows, if you've got anything to wave, wave it right now, hecause there's a chopper coming right at us!" And in the cathartic release of-pentup tension and fear, the men hollered. "It's surprising how loud you shout," remarked O'Kane afterward.

One by one, the men were plucked out of their craft, and winched up to the earsplitting din of the copter's engine, Once inside they were soughy blanketed and fed. Safely ashore after their 38-mile drift, the meo were examined by two doctors to determine if they were suffering from bypothermia, the lowering of body temperature from. exposure. At the Dhahran Airport heliopad, the men learned about the system which had saved their lives. The Coast Guard, starting a boat search at 6 p.m. Friday, four hours after their expected return, had informed both the Bahrain Coast Guard and the Saudi Civil Defense. At first light the next morning, the Saudi Civil Defense began the belicopter

"It's an excellent system," said Rutter, because the currents, winds, tides, and anticipated drift are plotted." Using this information, the Saudi director in charge of the rescue, Commander Rashid Al-Qatao, directed the helicopter pilot to the area where he anticipated the currents had taken them.

All the men are full of praise for the Coast Guard and the Civil Defense. "If it weren't for the Coast Guard, we'd be dead," Murley said somherly. "We can't praise them

"When you write it up, he sure you put in a big "Thank you" to the Coast Guard and Civil Defense," the sailors said. Their hrush with disaster has made them appropriately safety-conscious. "It's a lot more dangerous than people think," said Rutter. "When you first come out here, you see how beautiful and hive the sea is, and you think it's safe because there are no breakers near shore.

But once you are away from the shore, it

Rutter pointed out that the Coast Guard are lifesavers rather than spoilsports when they chase rubber dinghies hack to shore and insist boats meet stringent seaworthiness standards before being liceosed. Murley urges sailors to be prepared for every contingeocy. "Follow the Saudi Coast Guard regulations. Carry lightweight protective clothing like the alominom foil "space blanket" which can fold into a cigarette packet, and carry a distress transmitter."

O'Kane added the final piece of practical advice for nicotine addicts. "Keep a pack of 200 cigarettes handy if yon are a smoker."

Whenever Murley fell asleep, O'Kane and Rutter would pinch a cigarette from his extra pack to ease the strain and tension of drifting soundlessly into the Arabian Gulf.

Frank Sinatra back in game By William Scoble

LAS VEGAS, (ONS) — As police sifted through the ashes of the Hilton Hotel's casino, the moguls of Nevada's $ 2-billion -a-year gambling industry were fretting over a very different prospect. Ol Blue Eyes was back, with a new licence to gamble. Nearly two decades ago after a furious clash with the state's Gaming Board, Frank Sinatra was stripped of his license for allegedly rolling out the red carpet for a Mafia chieftain at one of

Recently a six-hour hearing by the same board turned into something like a love feast. Sinatra won unanimous, if conditional, approval to re-enter the botel-casino management scene. A starry cast of witnesses, including Gregory Peck and Kirk Douglas, sang their old friend's praises. The Sheriff of Los Angeles County swore that 'if Frank is a mobster, then I'm the Godfather.'

A bespectacled Roman Catholic prelate waved a newspaper picture of himself with the ageing crooner. 'Because Frank was pictured with me,' he asked, 'does that make him a priest?" (The point was that Sinatra's much-publicized 1976 snapshot in a pose with New York Godfather Carlo Gambino did not make him a Mafioso.) The vote to welcome Sinatra back, to be formalized by the State Gaming Commission, surprised no one. 'Frank kinda had a stacked deck,' said one state legislator.

Sinatra used old colleague Ronald Reagan's name as a personal reference to the board. At his birthday party last month a guest of honor was Reagan's new U.S. Attorney-General William French Smith. Governor Robert List and Gaming Board chairman Richard Benker granted him private interviews shortly before the hearing to assure the idol of Las Vegas would be 'treated with dignity.'

And so it proved. The big question now in America's gambling city is, how will Sinatra play with the new pack? Bunker says he sees oo reason why the singer should not use his license as a stepping stone to 'full casino ownership'. Speculatioo exists here that multimillionaire Sinatra aspires to become the major stockholder at Caesar's Palace, then join with oil mogul friends in further acquisitions bere and in Atlantic City.

Not everything was done 'my way' at this week's hearing. Sour-faced and somhresuited, Sinatra bridled at question after questioo. The list grew of favors never exchnaged, friendships not indulged.

He had never welcomed Chicago Mafia boss Sam Giancana (murdered in 1975) to his Cal-Neva Lodge casino; and, never delivered $2 million to Lucky Luciano in Cuba in the

The first consideration is price. You'll find that the SONY BETAMAX is most competitively priced, and is affordable by all those who have always wanted a video.

Best Quality

Another important factor is Quality. SONY products have won wide acclaim for their reliability, through the strictest quality control procedures adopted in SONY plants all over the world.

Reputable Brand Name

Then comes Brand name. SONY is a pioneer in the field of advanced electronics and has many world firsts to its credit. The SONY Trinitron colour television picture tube is radically different from conventional tubes, and won the covetted "Emmy Award" from the U.S. Academy of Television Arts and Science.

SONY. An International Success Story

The spirit of SONY

Sony is a trail blazer, always a seeker of the unknown.

SONY never intends to follow old trails, but hopes to find its own paths of progress by opening up new trails, yet to be trod. Through this progress, SONY wants to serve mankind.

New trails are strewn with hardships. But the people in SONY work in harmony to surmount these hardships, finding joy and pride in participating creatively to achieve the goal of each pioneering effort.

SONY's policy is to respect and foster each one's abilities — the right person in the right position — always striving to bring out the best in the person, believing in each one and constantly allowing the individual to develop his or her abilities.

This is the vital force of SONY.

MR, KAZUO IWAMA - President and Chief Operating Officer of Sony.

President and chief operating officer Mr. Kazuo Iwama, has from the very early days of Sony, directed the technical and production sector.

He led the work of transistor development, including guidance for semi-conductor research by Nobel physicist Dr. Leo Ezaki, making Sony almost synonimous with the word "Transistor". Responsible for the overall operations of Sony, Mr. Iwama joined the Company then known as Tokyo Telecommunications Engineering Corporation in 1946.

MR. HAJIME UNOK! Managing Director of Sony Corporation — Japan.

Graduating in Geophysics from Tokyo Imperial University in 1942, Mr. Iwama entered the University's Earthquake Research Institute in 1945.

In 1958 he was appointed Senior Managing Director of Sony, Deputy President and Representative Managing Director in 1973 and President and Chief Operating Officer of Sony Corporation in 1976.

Mr. Iwama was awarded the covetted Medal of Honour with Blue Ribbon by the Emperor of Japan in 1979, in recognition of his pioneering work in developing the world's first transistor radio and home video.

Mr. Iwama is married, and has 3 children — a son and two dauthters.

SONY Growth and Expansion

Out of the rubble of World War II, Sony began in May, 1946, under the name "Tokyo Telecommunications Engineering Corporation". Ever since then, the spirit on which Sony was founded has been kept dynamically alive:

- = Do what others have not done.
- = Advance one step ahead of others.
- Utilize the highest level of technology available.
- Keep the entire world in sight.
- Foster each person's abilities to the fullest.

 Base organizational order on ability, performance, and personal character.

Creativity has been freely exercised, stimulated by this spirit. The result has been an array of superior electronic products enriching the lives of people everywhere.

Sony covers the entire range of technology required in its products, including semi-conductor devices, magnetic tapes, magnetic recording heads and cores, color picture tubes, electronic circuitry, audio components, precision mechanism, and related production equipment. This comprehensive coverage of technology and know-how, all by one company is a rare example perhaps the only one, in the entire world.

SONY Worldwide

Sony is a worldwide organisation ties in 23 countries of the world with sales offices and plants faciliand Japan.

SONY Quality

Product features and performance depend on research and development. Product quality and reliability depend on what goes into design and production.

Sony therefore manufactures the key parts used in its products. The semiconductors essential in electronic circuitry, picture tubes for Trinitron color television sets, magnetic heads, tapes, and mechanism for video and audio recorders, and numerous other components of critical importance are produced by Sony to meet strict quality standards, which in turn impart quality to the finished product.

The worldwide reputation of Sony products has resulted from a consistent policy of placing quality ahead of other considerations such as price. As an important part of this emphasis on quality, after sales service is provided through a network of Sony service stations and authorized service shops in the major cities of the world, to assure that users can continue to enjoy Sony products long after purchase.

The work of Research & Development for the future goes on all the time.

SONY Technology

Sony's constant search for innovative new products has contributed significantly to the advancement of electronics. The pioneering spirit has inspired many 'firsts in the world' or 'firsts in Japan.'

The ability to create a parade of new products also stems from the comprehensive range of technology covering practically every item from tapes to videotape recorders, and from microphones to complex audio systems. Engineers and scientists in each specialized field work together as a united team to develop a new product in a coordinated effort, once a goal has been set.

Effective research results come from a skillful balance between the creativity of individuals and disciplined management. Sony strives to maintain this balance in pushing ahead at the forefront of electronics.

Sony produced the first fully transistorized television set in the world in 1959 and initiated the concept of personalized television. The unique Trinitron color television picture tube, radically different from conventional tubes, was introduced by Sony in 1968.

These pioneering steps and subsequent progress have won wide recognition. In 1973, the National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences awarded an "Emmy" for the Trinitron. The Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., holds the first Trinitron produced as a historic item in the progress of color television. Various encyclopedias include it in their pages. Its inventors have been awarded many

Sony received three
"Emmy" Awards from the United States Academy of Television Arts and Sciences for outstanding achievement in the field of television and video technology.

SONY now into Business Machines

SONY's latest venture is the development and marketing of Business Machines.

The announcement made recently, coincided with the introduction of the Sony Series 35 Word Processor, with a floppy disc storage technology, that Sony intends to make available to other manufacturers.

Sony has also introduced the small size Typecorder — which is a portable, noiseless typewriter that is designed to store written and voice input on microcassetes.

From audio visual equipment to business machines, Sony progress in the past 35 years has been truly phenomenal and holds out the prospect of further progress and expansion for Sony

The introduction of the Typecorder and the Series 35 Word Processor, both incorporating the latest electronics technology, has led Sony into the vast world-wide business machine market.

a silver lining to the dark cloud that was Earvin "Magic" Johnson's knee injury, it has been the rapid development of Michael Cooper of the Los Angeles Lakers.

Cooper, Los Angeles' sixth man in its ruo to the National Basketball Association Championship last season, inberited Johnson's guard spot in the lineup after the magic man got hurt Nov. 18 and has helped the Lakers to a 27-16 record since then.

Cooper had two steals and one blocked shot in the final two minutes Sunday, and fed a perfect pass to Kareem Abdul-Jahbar for the go-ahead basket with 56 seconds to play as the Lakers edged the New York Knicks 96-93.

The Lakers expect Johnson to return to action Friday night, but will be able to bring him along slowly because Cooper is playing so well. At New York he had 12 points, nine rebounds, seven assists, four steals and one blocked shot.

Abdul-Jabbar led the Lakers with 32 points and Jamaal Wilkes and Norm Nixon added 19, apiece. Reserve guard Mike Glenn was New York's high scorer with 19.

The victory kept the Lakers within 41/2 games of first-place Phoenix in the Pacific Division race. The Suns beat Philadelphia 116-110.

Neither Los Angeles nor New York led by more than nine points in their nationally televised game, and the lead changed bands eight times in the fourth quarter. Abdul-Jabbar finally put Los Angeles ahead to stay 94-93 with his layup off the Cooper pass, then sealed the victory with two free throws with four seconds left.

Frenchmen stripped of titles Chaos mars European athletic meet

GRENOBLE, France, Feb. 23 (AFP) -The European Indoor Athletic Championship ended in controversy here Sunday when one world best performance was quashed and another gold medal winoer found himself demoted.

Both incidents involved Frenchmen, and left championship organizers with eggs on their face as the two-day European indoor circuit reached a close. The problems started when the bell for the last lap in the man's 3,000 meters final was sounded one lap to soon. Home hero Alex Gonzales powered to the tape and was then informed that he had won over 2,820 meters. Gonzales was then told he was being stripped of his gold medal, hut after a protest from French coach Jean Poczohut, he was confusiingly informed he would receive the gold medal, but not the European title.

Matters were compounded when pole vaulter Thierry Vigneron soared over 5.70 meters to win the gold. The bar was then found to have been one centimeter lower, which was important as 5.70 meters was Vigneron's world hest performance.

Amin steals the show

By a Staff Writer

JEDDAH, Feh. 23 - Amin of 1395 rewrote his name on the record book in the Binzagr B &H Cricket League when taking 5 for 5 and bowling his side to a fluent victory over KAA University during the weekend.

A month back, Amin claimed 5 to 15 to better the three-year old mark of 5 for 23 set by Rizwan of Pak Saudi. But that record was shattered by Nasim also of Pak Saudi when bagging 5 for 9 last week. However, this week Amin once again stole the show to get his name back on the record book.

1395, winning the toss found themselves restricted by the splendid attack and fielding of the University lads. However, Noakes with a breezy unbeaten 30 enabled them total 109 for 8. In reply, the University lads fared poorly. Amin being the chief wrecker. Amin was also deprived of an hat-trick on two occasion. Lloyd and Bahmer claimed two wickets each for 6 and 13 runs respectively.

In another match. Yellow Rose scored a thrilling 25-ruo victory over Indian Embassy while Pak Saudi beat Pak Jeddah by four wickets. JCC also scored a fluent 66 runs victory over IAL.

AUCKLAND, New Zealand, Feb. 23 (AP) — New Zealand collapsed sensationally in their second manings of the first test against India at the Basin Reserve in Wellingtoo

The tourists, all out for 223 in their first innings, were 152 runs short of the New Zealand first innings total of 375. But New Zealand's batting failed dismally in their second innings and they were all out for 100. With two days remaining, India need 253 for vic-

U.S. Congress urged strike for to okay package plan higher prices administration officials have predicted grave economic consequences, unless Congress approved President Reagan's sweeping program of steep tax and budget cuts aimed at reviving the U.S. economy.

Following Reagan's address to a joint Congressiooal session last week, Budget Director David Stockman, Treasury Secretary Donald Regan and Presidential Counsel-lor Edwin Meese gave separate television interviews urging quick legislative action on the economic recovery plan.

The president has proposed a 10 per cent tax cut for each of the next three years, plus cuts of $8 billion in former President Carter's budget for this financial year and $43.8 billion in the financial year starting Oct. 1. Stockman said Sunday that if Congress tion down to below five per cent in the next few years shouldn't be that extraordinary." Inflation is currently running at an annual rate of 12.6 per cent.

Stockman said, however, that if Congress refused to go along completely with the plan, the economic outlook for the United States was "dire."

"For that reason, I expect strong support" Stockman said, although conceding there might be some quibbling about the specifics

He said it would be a serious blow if the long-term tax cut proposals were implemented one year at a time, as some Democrats had suggested.

Meese agreed there was a real need for the tax cuts and said he believed the leaders of Congress would recognize this when they examined the Reagan administration's economic proposals.

"I am optimistic that we will get the total recovery package in substantially the same form .. it is a break with the past because for many years we have been going down the wrong road and they can see this," he said.

Meese said he did not regard the plan as a gamble because it had been carefully put together by the president and his advisers and then thoroughly checked by economists. "I don't believe Congress will turn its back, that it would be so insensitive to the need for jobs and economic recovery," he said.

Meese stressed that the proposals were a comprehensive package and that all parts of it were equally important to prevent the economy from deteriorating further.

lion Greek farmers have began a seven-day strike in support of several demands mainly centered on guaranteed prices to cover production costs plus profit.

Agriculture Minister Athanassios Canellopulos had said guaranteed prices were adequate, and an increase would lead to "an explosion of the economy.

A spokesman for the General Confederation of Farmers' Association did rule out that farmers would refuse to supply produce to press their demands for reasonable prices, low-interest loans and a five-year moratorium on tbeir dcbts.

The strike has been called to coincide with the meeong in Brussels of the European Common Market farm ministers.

Farmers also demand protection against bad crops caused by weather, pension increases and medical insurance. Greece became the tenth member of the common market this year. The move came as civil aviation unions called for a 48-hour strike on internacional and internal flights of Olympie Airways from 2200 hours Sunday, in response to reports the government intends to return the airline to private ownership. The government bas denied the reports. Olympie Airways helonged to Greek shipowner Aristotle Onassis who died in March 1975, and was nationalized in January 1975. The unions are demanding a five-day week and a greater pay increase than the eight per cent offered by management. Some union leaders believe that the rejection of their demands is intended to make it easier to sell controversy over the European Community's trade deficit with Japan, less comment has been made on the fact that the community's deficit with the United States last year was nearly three times greater. This goes a long way to explaining why trade relations between the community and the U.S. are extremely strained, raising the possibility of a trade war.

In the community's trade deficit with Japan - which has been largely responsible for top level moves to persuade Japan to reduce its exports - totaled $10,7 billion, while the community's deficit with the U.S. was $28 billion, compared with $13 billion, in 1979.

The main problems between the European Economic Community (EEC) and the U.S. concern the rise in the value of the dollar, interest rates for export credits, synthetic fibers, textiles, steel, trade policy toward Japan, and to some extent the grain embargo against the Soviet Union in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

Finance ministers from the ten EEC member countries agreed bere last week that the strength of the dollar was largely due to the U.S. policy of high interest rates of around 20 per cent compared with nine per cent in West Germany for example.

Last December, when the U.S. administration headed by Jimmy Carter was in power, the two sides clashed over export credits within the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). The U.S. criticized the community for fixing minimum interest rates for export credits too low so as to win markets in the developing countries.

This row bas still not been settled, and U.S. President Ronald Reagan's policy of taking a more distant line with the developing countries and cutting $410 million from the

of his compaign to slash federal spending are unlikely to make a solution easier. However sion to deregulate oil prices. The community had protested that low U.S. oil prices gave an unfair advantage to U.S. fiber producers as oil is the raw material. for syntheoc fibers. This enabled American maoufacturers to flood the European market, the community argued under pressure from manufacturers who demand antidumping controls against imports from the

The U.S. administration has also undertaken to deregulate natural gas prices before the planned date to provide greater freedom for the export of naptha, the vital oil-hased ingredient used in fiber production. But no firm date has been given for this.

By contrast, Washington, has not shown any flexibility over textiles. Manufacturers in the EEC have told the commission that U.S. exporters bave now captured 23 per cent of the community's market for corduroy against 10 per cent in 1977 and 30 per cent of the denim market against 24 per cent.

Thatcher aide admits retreat on coal front

LONDON, Feb. 23 (R) - Britain's Trade Secretary John Biffen, a close adviser of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, bas acknowledged that the government had retreated over pit closures last week because it feared a widespread miners' strike.

Faced with the threat a national miners' strike, the government agreed to make more cash available to the coal industry to keep open the uneconomical pits.

Asked in a television Sunday whether the overnment had given in to industrial muscle Biffen replied: "Yes."

Last week's decision was greeted with jeers of "surrender" from press and oppositioo politicians and was a major reversal of Mrs. Thatcher's policies of curhing government

A national strike by coal miners in 1974 forced Edward Heath, the previous Conservative prime minister, to call a geoeral elecoon which he subsequently lost.

He said the government's decision showed it would make tactical adjustments io economic policies, but he added the longterm strategy had not changed. He, however, admitted workers in other sectors were going to try lo use the government's alleged surren-der as they made their own demands.

As first step U.S. to allow Poland to defer debt repayment

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23 (AP) - The administration of President Ronald Reagan bas decided to allow the financially pressed Polish government to defer repayment of more than $80 million owed to the United States, a published report says,

The Washington Post, in its Monday editions, quoted State Department sources as saying the administration is taking the action as a first step in aiding the Polish government. Poland has been beset by labor strife and "I think it's in Cuha's own self-interest to halt them (arms shipments) right now and end this transmittal of subversion into central America," Meese said Sunday on the "Issues and Answers" program of the ABC-TV television network.

Later in the day President Ronald Reagan. speaking with reporters as he prepared to board Air Force One for his return flight tn Washington following a California vacation, said, "we are all very concerned" about developments in El Salvador.

Meese, in the television interview, said the United States would try to stop the shipments by working with countries through which the

Ex-hostage receives death threat

BALCH SPRINGS, Texas, Feb. 23 (AP) - Marine Sgt. Johnny McKeel Jr., one of the 52 former American hostages in Iran, has said he has received several death threats since he returned home, many from people identifying themselves as Vietnam veterans.

McKeel said Sunday he has received "about 12" threats on his life, mostly in letters. McKeel said in a telephone interview that he has not notified authorities and is trying to ignore the threats. "I don't take them seriously' he said, adding "99 per cent of them are just cranks anyhow."

Mckeel said he's also been plagued h "people calling and not saying anything and hanging up." Many of the threats were from people who said they were Vietnam veterans upset by all the attention lavished on the former bostages, he said. The callers and letter writers did not identify themselves by name McKeel said.

Indian riot toll mounts

NEW DELHI, Feb. 23 (R) - Police opened fire Monday to disperse a crowd in the western Indian city of Ahmedabad where five persons were killed in violent incidents Sunday, the Press Trust of India (PTI) reported. Nohody was injured in Monday firing, but one man was admitted to hospital with acid burns, PTI said.

At least 17 persons have died during the one-month-old disturbances in Ahmedabad and other cities in Gujarat state where students are protesting the reservation of seats for lower castes in medical colleges.

fail, Meese said, "we would take other steps." Asked if the administration had ruled out a blockade of Cuba, he said: "One of the things you don't do is rule out anything. It's not wise to let those who are trying to ship the arms know what steps we will take until it's necessary to do that.'

Meese said the United States would not be limited to using military force against Cuba, bowever, but could resort to "economic steps." "There are intermediate actions that can he taken which have to do with informing the peoples of other countries about what's bappening," he said.

Later, speaking with reporters as he and Reagan prepared to board Air Force One, Meese said the administration has developed contingency plans to deal with developments in El Salvador but "we're not going to say what they are, nor are we precluding any-

Shortly before President Jimmy Carter left office, the United States sent $10 million in military aid to El Salvador. Last week, a State Department memorandum charged that Salvadoran civil strife had hecome "a textbook case of indirect armed aggression by Communist powers."

The memo asserted that "the political direction, organization and arming of the Salvadoran insurgency is coordinated and heavily influenced by Cuba with the active support of the Soviet Union and other Communist countries."

Meese said President Reagan and Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. have heen sending signals to the Soviets warning them that the United States is heginning a "new era of foreign policy."

"We're not belligerent. We're not arrogant. All we're interested in is keeping the peace of the world along with our allies," he

ABC News, quoting State Department sources, reported late Sunday that the Cuban government had "heard directly" from the Reagan administration of its position on the arms shipments. A State Department spokesman would not confirm or deny the

In Washington Secretary of State Haig is meeting Monday with French Foreign Minister Jean Francois-Poncet to review the situation in El Salvador.

Meanwhile, troops backed by belicopters and armored vehicles swooped on guerrilla bases southeast of San Salvador Sunday and killed at least 50 leftists in fierce fighting, a government spokesman said in San Salvador. Government losses were put at five dead. All roads in the coastal area were blocked by the army for more than four hours to cut off the guerillas' escape.

In the capital, the government had still not issued any statement on Col. Adolfo Arnoldo Majano, a former member of the ruling junta who was arrested bere Friday after two months in hiding.

BLAST HITS RADIO: Firemen clear debris from a big hole in the concrete wall torn by a bombing late Saturday night that shook the U.S.-financed Radio Free Europe in Munich. Eight persons were injured and the damage to the radio station was put at $2 million. West German police suspect political motives behind the explosion. East European governments have for years accused the radio of cold war-mongering and attempted to jam its hroadcasts.

Kajai warns opponents

TEHRAN, Feb. 23 (Agencies) — Iranian Prime Minister Muhammad Ali Rajai has warned political opposition groups in his country that they would he destroyed if they did not cooperate with the existing order. Rajai, whose government is dominated by the fundamentalist Islamic Republican Party (IRP), also indicated the increasing nfficial exasperation with press attacks on his administration.

His opponents were "hypocrites, counterrevolutionaries and trouhlemakers' who were "the real colleagues of Reagan," he said, in a television address Sunday night. "Those who, against the orders of the interinr ministry, demonstrate and create street violence, and those who try to create unrest by planting bomhs, are well known to our people," Rajai said.

But be told his oppnnents: "The people want you to come back to their nation and to Islam. Our revolution is humane and constructive, not a revolution of bayonets and executions. And I hope you will not make it become one."

Rajai, bowever, did not name any of his opponents. But Iranian observers said he evidently felt the need to defend the IRP-led government's position against increasingly open attacks in recent weeks by groups ranging from the moderate supporters of President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr to the semi-legal leftist parties which have a wide following among students and minnrities. His speech followed rejection of criticism by the IRP itself. The prime minister is nnt a member of the party although his position reflects its views. The party newspaper said three days ago that opposition attacks were in effect criticism of Islam itself and that this played into the hands of imperialism.

A former Iranian presidential candidate said in Beirut Sunday the Soviet Union supported the Iranian revulution. Addressing a press conference, Jalaladdin Farsi said Soviet officials had assured him during his visit to Moscow that they were not selling arms to Farsi's seven-man delegation arrived in Beirut from the Soviet Union where they visited Soviet universities and studied the conditions of the students, he said.

A military communique carried by Iran official news agency, Pars said Sunday Iranian and Iraqi positions in Ahwaz, capital of Iran's southern oil province of Khuzistan, continued to shell each other with heavy artillery. Fighting also continued in most of the western front, where Iranian troops killed or wounded 50 Iraqis in 24 hours, the communique claimed.

LIMA, Feb. 23 (Agencies) — Peruvian requires."

Border fighting

military sources have said the country's armed forces bad been fully mnbilized following the latest flare-up on the jungle frontier with Ecuador in the Condor mountains. At the same time, the Ministry of Commerce announced Sunday that Ecuador bad suspended all imports of Peruvian goods.

A communique from the presidential palace claimed Sunday the capture of three Ecuadorean emplacements inside Peruvian territory. "The Peruvian armed forces have precise instructions from the supreme government to eliminate any infiltration detected on the Peruvian side of the Condnr mountains," the communique said. Any further incursion would be considered an act of war and the Peruvian armed forces would take "the corresponding actions in Equadorean territory," it added.

There were no reports of new fighting Sunday. "There is nothing new. We have defined our position in the communique," said Peruvian Vice Adm. Juan Egusquiza Babilonia, head of the armed forces joint command.

Foreign Minister Javier Arias Stella said "the Peruvian people should remain serene, secure in the knowledge that we will act with firmness but with the reflection the moment

Meanwhile, representatives of four countries monitoring the ceasefire between Peru and Ecuadnr expressed concern about mounting complaints of border violations from both countries, a diplomatic source said Sunday in the Brazilian capital Brasilia.

The four countries - Brazil, Chile, Argentina and the United States - held a brief, late-night ambassadorial level meeting Saturday to discuss reports of violations from both sides of the disputed region.

Military attaches from the four nations, dispatched from Lima and Quitn, remained in the contested region, but had limited access to the border, said the source close tn the diplomatic effort. The mediators were acting in their role as guarantors of the 1942 protocol of Rio De Janeiro, which called for horder demarcation hetween the rival

The source, who asked not to be identified, said the four-nation group might meet again. on Monday to seek hetter means of monitoring the ceasefire. "They are concerned by the repeated charges that the ceasefire is being broken by both parties in the dispute," the source said.

West discusses cash aid to Poland

PARIS, Feb. 23 (Agencies) — Delegates from Western countries met here Monday to discuss emergency financial aid for Pnland, a reliable source said. The main concern was finding ways of rescheduling the Polish debt, as Warsaw now had an urgent need for new cash to meet its nbligations. Pnland owes nearly $25,000 million to various Western countries, especially the United States West Germany, Canada, France and Japan. This year. Warsaw will need about $10,000 million in new loans, according to an estimate hy Polish authorities.

Japan said last week that it would propose aid totaling $30 million, which would allow Poland to take care of about half of its loan repayments now due in Japanese creditnrs. The attitude of otherWestern countries, some of whom have already granted Poland easier terms for repayments, bas not been made

Dollar advances,

LONDON, Feb. 23 (AP) - The dollar made some gains against most European currencies Monday. Gold also made some early advances, but fell back in morning trading. Currency dealers reported that the dollar's surge followed firming Eurodollar interest rates, which make the currency more attractive, and a "technical reaction" to Friday's sharp drop in the wake of a fall in U.S. shortterm interest rates.

Another factor Friday was simultaneous actions by the West German and Swiss central banks to hike borrowing costs in their countries to slow the dollar's climb in recent Meanwhile, negotiators for the government and the independent union Solidarity bave nearly completed work in Warsaw on a new Polish labor law that codifies some of the issues agreed to during last summer's labor unrest. The law appears to be a compromise measure that maintains the leading role of the Communist Party in Poland and allows the Polish parliament, to limit strikes but for only two months per year.

Both the government commission drafting the law and negotiators from Solidarity, formed during last summer's labor unrest, have agreed on most items in the law. The new measure, if approved by the parliament after debate, says Sejm (parliament) can prohihit strikes for two months in case of a "critical economic state." But such an action would be limited duration to two months and could not be repeated during the year. . *

week and apparently had afterthoughts to give the dollar a reprieve," a Zurich dealer commented. Most dealers expected the dollar to firm up further.

In Tokyo, the dnllar closed at 206.70 yen, up from Friday's 205.70 yen. In London, it cost $2.2655 to buy one British pound compared to $2.3025 Friday. The price of gold opened in London at $509 an ounce, up $1.50 on Friday's close. But it was later "fixed" at $506.50. This is a guideline price, not an actual sale price, calculated hy London's five main bullion dealers.

In Zurich, gold opened at $509.50, $\frac{1}{2}six down on Friday, and later sligged to $506.50. The price of silver in London was quoted at $13.15, 10 cents down on Friday's closed

Basque guerrillas list terms to free 3 consuls

MADRID, Feb. 23 (Agencies) — Basque guerrillas demanded Monday that reports on alleged police torture be published and hroadcast by Spain's main news media in return for the release of the three honorary consuls of Austria, El Salvador and Urugnay kidnapped from their homes last Thursday. A man claiming to speak for the political-military wing of the separatist organization. ETA listed the demands in a telephone call to a Basque radio station. He set no deadline for meeting the terms.

The caller said the guerrillas wanted a 1980 Amnesty International report to be read fully on national television and on the main radio stations and to be published in major Spanish daily newspapers. They also demanded similar airing of a report by the human rights commission of the Basque home-rule parliament on alleged ill-treatment of guerrilla suspects in police stations and civil guards harracks.

A third demand was that 18 pictures said to show signs of physical violence on the bedy of Basque guerrilla suspect Jose Arregui he televised at peak viewing this. Arregui fied 10 days ago in a Madrid jail after spending nine days in police custody. An autopsy showed marks of violence on his body.

The move was apparently timed to con-cide with a confidence vote in the Spanish parliament. Prime Minister-designate Leopoldn Calvo Sotelo seems certain to man Monday afternoon's confidence vote. Sotels, deputy in outgoing Prime Minister Adolfo first-round absolute majority of 176 - half the members of the lower bouse plus one. But he needs only a simple majority in Monday's vote and the result of Friday's hallot, when he obtained 169 votes to 158, virtually assured him of success.

Political sources said Soteln, 54, wouk move soon to end the government crisis triggered by Suarez's sudden resignation. They said he could present his centerist cabinet to King Juan Carlos hy Tuesday if be won the hallot. Sotelo, a conservative who was economy chief in Suarez's government, was outlined a program intended to reduce acute 14 unemployment and cut Spain's cripping of import bill.

His main foreign policy aim is to join the European Common Market, and he favnrs taking Spain intn the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO). The main opposition Socialist Party has criticized the program as too conservative and vague, while the Com-" munist Party said a new minority government was certain to be weak and unstable. Both are it opposed to NATO membership.

Meanwhile, Per Lindegard, the Danish consul in the Basque seaport of Lbao, has the denied reports that the kidnapping of three honorary consuls by the ETA movement had been led to an exodus off oreign consular staff from the province. He said that only one consular staff. had left, and that some others had merely left for Madrid at the weekend to consult with their embassies. The rest were still on duty.

Fresh U.S. drive

NATO defense sparks row undersecretary of state for defense, said the U.S. drive to persuade its NATO allies to spend more on defense, launched at a Western allies' military conference here, seems set to renew wrangling within the alliance. West European NATO countries, many already at odds with Washington ever possible deploy-ment of neutron warhends; could prove refuse tant to make the sacrifices urged by a senior Pentagon official at the two-day conference which ended here Sunday

U.S. Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci said Saturday that Washington would neither upgrade its forces in Europe nor play a lone role in defending Western interests elsewhere if alliest defense spending did not increase sharply Other speakers at the con-ference, including NATO Secretary General Joseph Luns, urged a united effort from the alliance to increase its military preparedness.

A senior British defense ministry official appealed in a speech to the 140 imitary experts from time nations for a global strategy hy the Western democracies to counter Soviet influence and help Third World countries defend themselves. Geoffrey Pattie, British partiamentary

West needed to counter instability in and developing countries which produced essential raw materials such as cobalt, silver, platinum and chrome. Pattie said the British government was making a speedy review of policy on coordinated Western military defense moves outside the NATO area.

Other NATO countries, including Germany, have opposed any extension of NATO's sphere of action. The Bonn government has clearly stated it would not send troops with a NATO force to the Gulf, although the west needs oil supplies from the area. But Detense Minister Hans Apel told the conference that West Germany was prepared to carry its share of any extra defense commitments decided on by the alliance.

He strongly defended West Germany's " has record on defense spending following pressure from Washington to keep to a NATO decision to taise defense hudgets by an interannual three per cent in real terms. Bonn's and 1981 hudget of $20.6 billion nevertheless have threatens to fall short of the requisite by the increase. -.
